Core Communication Skills using NVC

A One-day Training for Organisations

Course Aims

Participants will be able to understand:

1. The core motivation behind anything that anyone says or does.
2. The forms of communication that antagonise others or provoke resistance from them.
3. The essential principles of emotional intelligence.
4. How to listen to another person and demonstrate to that person that they have been heard.
4. How to express themselves in ways that are both assertive and respectful of others.

Course Objectives

By the end of the workshop participants will be able to identify:

1. 20 key areas of human need and how they impact on people's everyday behaviour.
2. 7 forms of communication that antagonise others or provoke resistance from them.
3. 4 common miscommunications of feelings and be able to accurately articulate a range of core feelings.

They will also have practiced:

4. Empathising with and acknowledging the feelings and needs of another person.
5. Expressing themselves clearly, respectfully and assertively using observations, feelings, needs and specific requests.

Clear communication is the basis of harmonious and productive work relationships between staff and with clients. This one-day course is designed to equip members of your organisation with essential communication skills that will enable them to communicate themselves clearly, respectfully and assertively to others, and also understand and empathise with others more effectively.

This course also serves as a precursor to our one day course on conflict resolution. If you wish to discuss the possibility of delivering these two courses together in a shorter format, please contact Daren at NVC Resolutions.

The principles taught here are the foundation skills of the internationally renowned communication and conflict resolution process, Nonviolent Communication (NVC), which is currently being taught to people from all walks of life in more than 95 countries worldwide.
